LORD ACTON'S LIBRARY. Treasure Which Carnegio Presents to

Lord Acton's library, which Andrew Carnegie has presented to John Morley, was once catalogued for sale at auction, says the Chiengo News. That was twelve years ago and the dispersal of the books was prevented by Mr. Carnegie's coming forward as a private purchiser and leaving them in the hands of their former owner Foreign buoks form the bulk of the collection, and though they treat largely of ceclesinstical bistory, they are mostly of a date no faither lack than fifty or sixty years. The main feature is perhaps an exhaustive series of works, local and general, on the history of France, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Russia, Poland, Bohemia, Hungary, Iceland, Sweden, and Notway. If Lord Acton bought beyond his means it was not by paying record prices for first clittons of Shakespeare folios or such like freasures. He had for sixteenth century books, but not any single one that would sell for Andrew Carnegle is not the flist millionaire to buy a historian's library. The 7,000 volumes of chronicles and travels from which Gibbon distilled the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," were purchased by Backford after the writer's death. "I bought It," said the author of "Vathek," "to have something to read when I passed through Lausanne." There were few cirilles in the colleteion, but most of the authors were in the best obtainable editions and in perfect condition, the fastilious Cibben was incapable of behaving disrespectfully to a book, For six weeks Reckford revelled in his purchase and read himself nearly blind. He soon tired of his books, however, and presented the whole collection to a German physician named Schell. The recipient showed his appreciation of the treature by promptly selling it.

NEW KIND OF INSURANCE.

Austria Has a Scheme Which the United States Never Even Thought

Austria has gone the United States one better by offering an insurance which connot be duplicated on this side of the water. The Vienna Manufacturer's Strike association is the name of the organization, and it proposes to safeguard employers against employes who try to destroy the trade of any man failing to acknowledge their demands. That the insurance is risky cannot be cenied, yet the mutual feature saves it from criticism. Of course, statistics were used in computing the premiums which must be charged. Owing to the fullure to keep reliable figures for any great length of time some difficulty was experienced in deciding on the charges which should be made. However, it was found that in Austria from 1801 to 1887 there was an annual average of 30,000 strikers wasting 400,000 days in strike idleness. With other data concerning the number of employes under those who will go into the association the pronoters have figured that the annual premium should be four mills on every dollar of the yearly pay roll.

This provisional estimate may be remarkable, but hardly more so than the statistics gathered by the great life insurance companies regarding the number of those who commit suicide. are drowned, are killed in bottle, or die of tuberculosis. The stringeness of the new association is chiefly in the newness of the system.

Necessarily the assocution if forced n have stringent rules regarding the disbursement of benefits. The executive committee decides whether benefits shall be paid. If this committee, or a subcommittee appointed by it, investigates and finds that the employer has furnished good carse for a stage then his insurance will profit him nothing.-St, Louis Republic.

Our dressmiking department is in charge of Miss Gertiude Priddy, who needs no introduction to Decatur ladies. That she is one of the most accomplished tailoresses in Central Illinois will not be disputed, and her reputation is sustained by the garments that are daily being turned out under her supervision. Miss Priddy keeps herself thoroughly informed as to the most correct things in ladics' tailor made garments, and we guaranter that every garment that she permits to go from the department is as near perfection in style and finish as is possible to obtain.
